

1

*On the way home
from school, we picked
some beautiful yellow dandelions.*

I made sure to put them in water right away, so that they wouldn't wilt too quickly.

3

*They looked beautiful
on our table during lunchtime.*

4

But, they looked a little wilted at dinnertime.

*Then, when bedtime
came along: "Oh no!
My flowers are dead!
What can I do?"*

*I guess that kind of flower doesn't last
very long.*

*The next morning
at breakfast, to my surprise: “The flowers
are alive again!”*

8

*I guess they weren't dead after all, but
were only sad or sleeping. Ha! Ha!*

That night, I felt upset because I didn't have time to play before bed.

*“Oh no!” said Mom.
“It looks like my little flower is fading.”*

“Is she talking about me? Am I like a flower too?”

*It was sad to see
the flowers wilt.
Do I look like that
when I get upset?*

*Think, think, think!
Oh, I get it now.*

When I put a smile on my face, I look like a cheery, lively flower!

*But when I am
grumpy, I start to
look droopy and sad,
just like a wilting
dandelion.*

*I want to keep my smile going
forever and ever.*
