“Children are our most valuable resource.”

— Herbert Hoover,
31st President of the United States

One fine year, in a colourful, diverse, and connected world, World Children's Day grew near. Children around the world decided to get together virtually to share some words of wisdom.

They decided to include the best ones in a book for all the children of the world to read and remember how important World Children's Day is and what it is all about.

Let's embark on an adventure and discover the wisdom they shared!

In a quiet mountain village of Nepal, little Hiro spoke, "Remember, even the tallest mountains can be conquered one step at a time."

In the sun-kissed fields of India, young Priya giggled, "Just like the lotus blooms amidst the muddiest waters, believe in yourself, it can help you rise above any challenge."

In the vibrant markets of Mexico City, mischievous Carlos exclaimed, "When life throws you piñatas, swing your bat of kindness instead of anger!"

Over in the enchanting forests of Norway,
curious Astrid whispered, "In the darkness,
look for the forest's fireflies; they remind us that small sparks of hope can light up
our world."

In the serene savannahs of Somalia, wise Kaya shared, "When faced with uncertainty, listen to the sounds of the quiet voice from your inner being – they will guide you towards your true path."

Emma from London, with her bright smile, would say, "Dream like a wildflower, for even in the darkest corners, hope will always find its way to you."

Ahmed of Pakistan, with his wise eyes,
would share, "Listen to nature's whispers,
and you'll find secrets that will make your heart dance."

From across the globe in New Zealand,
Aiko, with her gentle voice, would offer,
"When you stumble, let courage and compassion guide your steps. Like the mighty Kauri, you have the strength to grow tall."

Zhenya of Lithuania, with her infectious laughter, would proclaim, "Embrace the kaleidoscope of life, for within its colourful bursts lies the sweetness of joy and surprises."

From France, little Pierre, with twinkling eyes, said, "Imagination is the key that unlocks the door to endless possibilities. Let your dreams soar, and you shall reach great heights."

In Japan, sweet Sakura whispered, "Just like a cherry blossom, life is both fragile and beautiful. Embrace every moment, for even the briefest sparkle has the power to bring joy."

From the palm spotted beaches of Sri Lanka, wise Malaika spoke, "Our differences make us unique, but our love binds us together. Let us celebrate diversity and build a bright future hand in hand."

And finally, from the United States, adventurous Alex exclaimed, "In every corner of the globe, magic awaits discovery.
Take a leap of faith, and watch the world
unveil its wonders."

The children transcended borders, inspiring children around the world to dream, listen, persevere, and embrace life's joy. As their voices blended, these young souls reminded us all that children hold the wisdom of the world, teaching us to be profound, thoughtful, and wise.

So, take these wise words to heart and let them guide you on your own magical journey.

“If you want your children to be intelligent,
read them fairy tales.
If you want them to be more intelligent,
read them more fairy tales.”
