“Optimism is the faith that leads to achievement.
Nothing can be done without hope and confidence.”

Helen Keller

Deep in a burrow, safe underground, lived Bunny Bella, the Easter Bunny. She had a soft, fluffy tail and a hop so quick that she could bounce from one side of the burrow to the other in a blink. Each year, she and her helpers—the chickens and rabbits—worked hard to prepare colourful eggs for Easter morning.

The chickens laid eggs and clucked cheerfully, while the rabbits helped paint them in beautiful, bright colours. They worked day and night, making sure everything was perfect for the big day.

But this year, something unexpected happened. As Easter approached, the chickens and rabbits grew tired. Their feathers drooped, and the rabbits stretched out, yawning widely.

"Bella," said the eldest rabbit, "we're exhausted! We've been working so hard, and we need a rest. We're taking a holiday before Easter!"

Before Bella could say a word, the chickens and rabbits packed their suitcases and hopped away to a sunny island, leaving her all alone.

Bella's heart sank. "Oh no! Easter is just days away! How ever will I get all the eggs ready on my own?"

She thought and thought and thought some more.

Then, she had an idea.

She called on her woodland friends—squirrels, mice, deer, and even the wise old owl. "Will you help me save Easter?"
she asked.

But they were busy preparing for winter
and couldn't help.

She paced back and forth, thinking hard again. What ever would she do?
Just then, there was a knock on the door.

It was the wily weasels, the honking
geese, and the badgering badgers.
"We heard Easter might be ruined and wanted to help!"

Bella thought hard, she was told by her
Mama and Papa not to trust weasels,
badgers, and geese,
but what could she do?

She decided to trust her instincts not here say and invited them in.

“Please do come in and help!”

"Of course!" they all cheered.

The geese laid the eggs, the weasels carefully dipped eggs in golden hues, and with their tail brushed them with pinks and blues, and the badgers tied little bows around them and gently carried the finished eggs, placing them in neat baskets, ready to be hidden for children to find.

With teamwork and determination, they worked late into the night, finishing just in time. As the sun rose on Easter morning, Bella looked around at the beautifully decorated eggs and sighed with relief.

Just then, the chickens and rabbits returned, looking refreshed and happy.

But when they saw all the eggs perfectly prepared, they gasped. "Bella!

You did it without us?"

"Not without you," Bella smiled. "With new friends! Easter is about joy and teamwork."

From that day on, all the woodland animals joined the Easter preparations, making it a celebration for all and ensuring that no one was left in or out and no one was over or under worked.

And Bella knew that no matter what,
Easter would always be saved—with a little help from friends.
